FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

GREENHAVEN IS FISCALLY FEASIBLE

Decatur, GA. The proposed city of Greenhaven GA has received the results of their feasibility study. According to the University of Georgia Carl Vinson Institute's Principal Investigator on the study, Mr. Ted Baggett, "We have concluded that a city comprised of the study area undertaking to provide the municipal services identified by CCCSD would be fiscally feasible." In response to the question of whether the proposed city would generate enough revenue to meet its expenses, the report finds Greenhaven to have a significant revenue surplus.

Total Annual Expenses	$	18,434,437
Total Annual Revenues	$	45,611,418
Amount of Revenues exceeding Expenses	$	27,176,981

The Concerned Citizens for Cityhood of South DeKalb (CCCSD) who have been spearheading the efforts to create Greenhaven expressed satisfaction with the report results. "We consider the results of the report to be a validation of our belief that we have a viable area that can now begin to focus on economic development within its boundaries." The results of the report will be available on the Greenhaven blogspot page (GreenhavenGA.blogspot.com).

The report's findings have come at an important time. In a unique, innovative move, on Saturday, February 28th at 1:00pm, an open community meeting will be held to inform the public about the charter, the guiding document that explains the structure and roles of the new proposed government. The community meeting will be held at Columbia High School, 2106 Columbia Dr, Decatur, GA 30032. The charter will be part of the proposed bill introduced to the state legislature to approve the proposed city of Greenhaven.

The feasibility study results and the charter represent two major steps for the proposed city of Greenhaven.
